Chamber's Note

Farete - Bologna

'Between the 7th and 8th of September, Italcham accompanied a delegation of seven South African companies to the Farete Exhibition in Bologna. Companies from the robotics, construction, warehousing, engineering and food sectors were exposed to the cutting edge of products and technology coming from the Reggio Emilia region, the capital of which is Bologna.

It was the first outgoing delegation since the onset of the coronavirus pandemic. During this period, Italcham's involvement in international activities was mainly reduced to virtual interactions. While this opened up certain new opportunities, it was never a perfect substitute for fostering new business relation.

Delegates reported an overwhelming success from the event, enjoying making new connections and the introduction to new possible work partnerships. While factors such as technology, price, skill and institutions al play a role in enabling business, the key ingredient missing from this list is that of business relationships.

Initiatives such as Farete, which establish relations at the B2B level, have the power to contribute to South Africa's economy and society by facilitating the entry of new technologies and practices into the market, with a potential to improve the way things are done.

Italcham takes great pride in its key role of facilitating meaningful business partnerships that would otherwise never exist. This is our small but ever crucial intervention.

Buon lavoro.

PRESS RELEASE - 5 September 2022

Johannesburg, 5 September 2022, South Africa: Renergen is pleased to announce a major milestone, with the Virginia Gas Project (Virginia) now operational, transitioning Renergen from explorer to producer status by producing liquid hydrocarbons, with the helium module to produce liquid in due course.

Renergen has beneficial use of the system and has commenced filling of bulk storage tanks to begin delivery of the product to customers.

Importantly, through the commencement of operations, Virginia becomes South Africa's first commercial LNG plant. Renergen will now focus on ramping-up operations over the coming months to full Phase 1 capacity, which will play a key role in reducing the country's carbon footprint by substituting diesel in trucks and for commercial users.

Speaking about this major milestone achievement, CEO Stefano Marani said, "This watershed moment in the Company's lifecycle has finally arrived. This is a significant step on the path to showing the world that Renergen can become a global player in liquid helium supply and a material local supplier of much-needed LNG.

"The transformation of the Company since first listing in 2015 has been truly incredible, and I am very proud of the efforts, hard work and determination of the team in getting Renergen to the position we find ourselves in today. Virginia is a world-class project, and we will now focus on ramping-up operations to full Phase 1 capacity over the coming months."
